UNABLE TO PREVENT HARDSHIPS IN CAMP

THOUSANDS OF VETERANS ARRIVE AT GETTYSBURG TAXING EVERY RESOURCE AVAILABLE.

LACK ACCOMMODATION

Railroads Unable to Transport Supplies in Time and Many Old Men Sleep in the Open as They Did in War Times.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Gettysburg, Pa., July 1.—Despite the strenuous efforts of the regular army to do impossible things, thousands of veterans spent the night on Gettysburg field with nothing between them and the stars but their clothes and their courage and nothing between them and the earth but a little more of the same thing.

Arrive in Thousands.

It wasn't the fault of the regulars and it wasn't the fault of the veterans. The railroads poured thousands into Gettysburg the best they could. They kept coming all night long and after daybreak and shortly after breakfast the rush began again.

Major Normoyle of the quartermaster's department, U. S. A., who has the pulse of the vast camp under his fingers, did not go to bed and neither did the little force of army officers.

Major Normoyle declared today that probably fifty thousand veterans will be on the field by night, five thousand more than were looked for.

Some Selfish Veterans.

In their rounds of the main streets of the camp in the early morning hours the regulars ran into many things that made them swear. While other veterans shivered in the chill before the dawn they found a Pennsylvanian in his tent snug as a bug in a rug lying on three blankets with three over him and nine beneath his cot. The Pennsylvanian was keeping them for friends, he said, but all but two of the blankets were taken from him in short order.

Many of the men of '63 spent the night around the fires near the cook tents talking and trying to forget that their bones were not so young as they used to be and that the ground was much harder than it was fifty years ago.

Although the railroads were not good to the veterans nature was. The usual cold breeze that springs up in the early morning hours did not visit the camp and there was only a slight fall of dew.

First Formal Day.

This was the first formal day of the semi-centennial celebration. Although Buford and Wheeler had a skirmish near Gettysburg fifty years ago yesterday, it was on July 1 that the battle began which forced the Union troops out of Gettysburg back towards Cemetery Ridge.

Colonel J. M. Schoonmaker, chairman of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg commission was the presiding officer for today's meeting in the big tent and Secretary of War Garrison, Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, Commander-in-chief Fred D. Beers of the G. A. R. and Commander-in-chief Bennett H. Young, of the United Confederate Veterans, were listed as the principal speakers.

Fifteen thousand veterans of the civil war sat in the sweltering heat of the big tent on the Gettysburg battlefield today and joined in the opening ceremonies of the first day of the semi-centennial celebration. The doctors of the regular army, the Pennsylvania department of health and the Red Cross looked with apprehension on the swelling crowd of old and feeble men that jammed the aisles, climbed over the seats and tried hard to look comfortable in a temperature that had left 100 behind hours before.

Col. J. M. Schoonmaker, chairman of the Pennsylvania battle anniversary celebration commission, presided, and the first address was by Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, who welcomed the men in blue and gray. Secretary of War Garrison followed with the oration of the day. Then came addresses by Judge Alfred B. Beers of Bridgeport, Conn., commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., and General Bennett H. Young of Kentucky, grand commander of the United Confederate Veterans. Secretary Garrison reached camp at noon. He motored from Baltimore and arrived on the heels of Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army. The secretary will spend several days here and inspect the big "city" from end to end. He was the first notable of the administration to arrive and the battery of artillery that has been waiting anxiously to unlimber got its first chance to thunder out a salute.

Young Gives Address.

General Bennett H. Young, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans in his address discussed the question of government pensions for the soldiers still alive who fought under the Stars and Bars.

"It may be," he said, "that the suggestion lately put into form to give confederate soldiers the same privileges in the national soldiers' homes as federal soldiers may lead to the establishing of this right; or that peace in its demand for the obliteration of all the bitternes of the past may demand that the nation shall pension surviving confederates. I do not even suggest or in the name of my people say that it would be accepted but this republic is a great destroyer of the cherished ideals of the past, when they stand in the way of completest justice. For nearly sixty years the people of the south without complaint have contributed millions for he pensions of federal soldiers. A nation's gratitude has been meted out through enormous grants to provide for the federal soldiers, their wives and children. No murmur has ever come from the men of the confederate army at this vast outlay, and there are some who predict that the hour may arrive in national life when the few and infirm remaining men who fought under the confederate standards with admittedly unsurpassed courage, should have in the evening time the comforts and conveniences that their intrepedity deserves.

Tribute to McKinley.

"William McKinley reached the sublimest heights of statesmanship when he allowed a little daughter of the South to pin a confederate badge on his breast and when gifted as few men with the power of forecasting political events he urged that the graves of the confederates who had died in northern prisons should have, at the cost of the nation's treasury a stone to tell who they were, whence they came and where they died. No greater triumph of generosity was ever witnessed when the United States put up markers over the sepulcres of southern soldiers and carved upon them those inspiring words 'Confederate Soldier' and thus declared to the world that the men who fought for the life of the Confederacy should have over their dust these magic words that touch the tenderest sentiments of a southern heart and proclaim highest distinction amongst those who love them because they died for the South land.

"The splender and importance of this occasion is immeasurably enhanced by the fact that no explanations are sought or expected. The men who come from the South come as Confederates. True, in a broader sense they are Americans, but for this particular occasion they are distinctly confederates.

"The scenes at Gettysburg today are the completest evidence of the greatness as well as of the perpetuity of the American republic."

Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, extended a welcome to the soldiers and sailors both the blue and gray survivors of the great hosts of brave men who fifty years ago, wrote upon the pages of the world's martial history the enduring fame and glory of the American soldier.

DRIVEN TO SUICIDE BY REBEL CRUELTY

Forty Women Residents of Durango Reported to Have Taken Their Own Lives Since City's Capture.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Mexico City, Mex., July 1.—Forty women residents, most of them of the better class, have committed suicide in the city of Durango since its occupation last week by the rebels after a long siege, according to a private letter received here from that city today. The women it says became desperate as the result of their treatment by the victorius rebels.

Consular advices say the rebels who entered Durango conducted themselves like bandits, burning a large part of the business section of the city after looting it and joining in the wildest excesses. The report says that foreign flags were not respected. A few American citizens were wounded during the fighting while one Englishman was killed according to these reports.

The Mexican government is preparing a column of troops to march to the relief of the city, but many days must pass before its arrival there.

To March on Juarez.

Colonel J. N. Medina, with between three hundred and four hundred well armed and equipped men marched out of Agua Prieta early today to assist General Villa in an attack on Juarez. Medina was elected mayor of Juarez under the Madero administration, but did not serve his full term.

The men he now leads to attack his home town are Sonora recruits. They are carrying a heavy seige cannon, two mountain howitzers and four machine guns and an ample supply of ammunition and provisions. The trip must be made overland and will require more than a week.

CAPITOL EMPLOYES MUST GET NEW APPOINTMENTS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 1.—Effective today, new notices of appointment of the several hundred employes in the state capitol must be made by the department heads and filed with the civil service commission. Chapter 556 of the laws of 1913 provided a re-adjustment of salaries of state employes, grave inequalities existing in the old schedule. The new law vests the salary fixing power in the heads of the department. Attorney General Owen today ruled that it will be necessary for these heads to file new notices of appointment and that the present incumbents must be appointed to positions created, the duties of which are substantially the same as those of the positions now held by them.

There is considerable uncertainty among many employes over their tenure under the new plan, but in most cases it is said there will be no change of employes.

While the official announcement of the disbanding says the railroads are satisfied that the work of the association is accomplished, it is said that as a matter of fact the roads have given up the job as hopeless. It is pointed out that more States are passing legislation detrimental to railroads each year and the employes are getting more radical in their claims. P. H. Morrissey, who has been president of the association since its formation, has accepted a position as assistant to the vice-president of the Burington road. Before becoming president of the association Mr. Morrissey was at the head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Jones-Works Excise Law Went Into Effect Today—No More Escape From Penalty for Jag.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., July 1.—If the provisions of the new Jones-Works excise law, which became operative today, are strictly enforced, the national capital will probably become the most unpopular place on the map in the eyes of those who are in the habit of indulging too freely in liquors stronger than grape juice. Enforcement of the new law will put an end to the practice of the police, common to almost all American cities, of releasing persons arrested for drunkenness after they have become sobered up. The act stipulates that a charge of misdemeanor must be made against a person arrested for drunkenness on the street or in any public place, and that upon conviction he shall be punished by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100, or by imprisonment for not less than five days nor more than thirty days. It is anticipated that the prospect of a public trial and a few days on the stope pile at Occoquan will cause a regular New Year rush for the water wagon now that the law has come into effect.

GOMPERS MAKES PUBLIC REPORT CONFIRMING STORY TOLD BY MULHALL.

Labor Federation President Declares That He Was Promised Money by Manufacturers' Representative.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 1.—Disclosures to follow the re-opening of the senate's lobby investigation tomorrow are expected to be among the most important developments in recent years in a congressional inquiry.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who figured prominently in Mulhall's story as the object of a long continued attack by those who attempted to bribe him and force him to give up his fight in behalf of labor legislation, has made public a detailed report of the attempted bribery. It confirms the story told by Mulhall.

The Gompers statement is a report that the labor leader prepared in 1907, after his experiences with Broughton Brandenberg, now a convict in Sing Sing prison, New York, who claimed to be in the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Efforts to obtain private interviews with Gompers aroused the latter's suspicion and he took a number of labor leaders into his confidence and later made a full report to them of the occurrences that followed.

Gompers met Brandenberg, says the report, under the advice and suggestion of other officials of the American Federation of Labor. Brandenberg represented himself as in charge of a bureau of the National Association of Manufacturers, organized "to expose the immorality and dishonesty of the leaders in the labor movement."

According to this report Gompers led Brandenberg on until the latter proposed that Gompers should prepare a general statement in the nature of a "confession"; should stand for re-election as president of the American Federation of Labor in 1908 and should then resign leaving the Federation of Labor crippled by his retirement and the exposure of other leaders.

"My object in coming to you is to say I want to save you," Brandenberg is quoted as saying. "I want to save you, and while I do not want to express in specific financial terms what the National Association of Manufacturers is willing to do, yet I can guarantee that you will be financially safe for the balance of your life."

The Gompers report states that the interview terminated there; that Gompers succeeded in keeping the paper Brandenberg had prepared for him to sign and that Vice President Duncan and other officials of the federation were at once made acquainted with the circumstances.

Discussion of administrative features of the tariff bill was taken up today by the senate caucus. Democratic leaders were endeavoring to close up the bill before adjournment tonight if possible.

To the Man Who Runs the Store

Are the goods on your shelves advertised by the manufacturers who induced you to stock up with them?

If you were called upon to advertise these goods, and to let people know that you sold them, what medium would you employ?

Without hesitation, we can answer the question for you: THE LOCAL NEWSPAPERS, of course.

You know, Mr. Dealer, that the one way to create an actual demand that means sales over your counter is through the medium of the daily press. When manufacturers, therefore, want to advertise their goods, tell them that the way to help you move these goods from your shelves is to use the newspapers of this city.

And be sure to co-operate with the manufacturer who spends money to bring customers to your store.

Dealers and manufacturers who are interested in local newspaper alvertising for nationally distributed products are requested to write to the BUREAU OF ADVERTISING, AMERICAN NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION, World Building, New York City.

She will take up her new work at St. Louis in the near future.

A purse of gold was presented Miss Kissell by the parish, as a token of appreciation of her good work while in the church. She leave today for

FIRST PAPERS GOOD UNTIL SEPTEMBER 26

Those Taken Out Before September 27, 1906, May Be Filed, According to Commissioner of Naturalization.

First naturalization papers, or declarations of intention to become a citizen issued before Sept. 26, 1906 are valid until September 27, 1913, according to Richard K. Campbell, Commissioner of Naturalization, who has written Clerk of the Court Jesse Earle in response to his inquiry. The previous understanding of the law was that all first papers taken out before June 29, 1906, would become void after the same date this year, the misunderstanding arising from the fact that in the first instance the dating was from the time of its passage instead of from the time the law went into effect.

The letter of Commissioner Campbell is as follows:

Clerk, Circuit Court,
Janesville, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:—In reply to your letter of the 24th instant, you are informed that courts exercising jurisdiction in naturalization matters have held that, for the present at least, the seven year limitation placed by the naturalization act upon the validity of declarations of intention does not apply to such papers filed before September 27, 1906.

The question as to the sufficiency of such declarations after September 26 of this year, that being seven years from the day upon which the general provisions of the naturalization act became effective, can be authoritatively decided only by the courts after said date, when the matter properly comes before them.

Very truly yours,
RICHARD K. CAMPBELL,
Commissioner of Naturalization.

COUPLE IS COMMITTED TO JAIL FROM BELOIT

Harmon is about 24 years old, but the Burdick girl gave hers as twenty, although her age was given as fourteen in the commitment.

PERSISTENT ATTEMPT IS MADE BY THIEVES

Two Windows on South Side of Thorne Building Broken Into in Attempt To Rob Optical Shop.

Thieves made a persistent but unsuccessful attempt to rob the optical shop of W. E. Arnold in the Thorne and Woods building, 60 South Main street, sometime during Monday night or early Tuesday morning. Two windows on the side of the building toward the library were broken and an entrance was effected into the rooms and office of Dr. J. P. Thorne in the rear of the optical shop, but as the door between the two offices was securely bolted the marauders were unable to get into the store in front where they evidently intended to make their haul. One of the southerly windows opening into the shop was broken so as to unfasten the lock but as there are bolts in the casing which were fastened, it was impossible to raise the window.

The other window opening off of Dr. Thorne's operating room was not fastened by the casing bolts and the screen was removed and the window raised after the window had been broken and the sash lock unfastened. Nothing was discovered missing in the office of Dr. Thorne as the thieves evidently did not care for any of the instruments which would have been too difficult to dispose of without suspicion. A large quantity of gold articles would have been available had they succeeded in entering the optical shop.

The police department was notified of the attempted robbery this morning as soon as it was discovered. Patrolman Patrick Fanning made an investigation. The police pronounce it work of amateurs.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY FOR THE GOLF CLUB

Over Hundred Dollars Worth of Fancy Explosives Secured for July Fourth Festivities.

Announcement was made today that the Golf Club has secured over a hundred dollars worth of fireworks, including rockets, set pieces and specialties, which will be set off on Fourth of July evening, materially adding to the festivities already planned. The fireworks committee is composed of E. C. Baumann, M. R. Jeffris and Howard Green, who will have charge of setting off the display. The exhibition will be the finest seen in Janesville this year and can be seen from many parts of the residence districts.

Owing to the fact that there will be a large number who will want their supper at the club house Friday evening, all having that intention are urged to notify the stewardess at an early date.

LINK AND PIN

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul.

Engineer Bush and Fireman Haney left on an extra this morning for Rockford, at four-thirty, with engine 1148.

Engine 2134 is at the local shops from Rockford, where one of the new lights has been installed on it.

Fireman Cavey took the dog run last night with Engineer Allen.

Engineer Hillmeyer has been layed up for about a week, because of a mosquito bite, which he received in the arm. Blood poison has set in, and it may be several weeks before he will be able to work. The arm is swelled considerably.

To meet the requirements of the new law, that of having the new electric headlights on by July the first, the local force have been working hard, and all of the working engines are equipped now with one of these lights. Switch-engines do not have to carry one.

Since that time she has made her home with her brother, Charles L. Valentine. Mr. Stevens died several years past. Funeral services for Mrs. Stevens will be held at the home of Mr. Valentine at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

August Dalton will serve fourteen days, Fred Kingsley, six days, Elmer Fallon, eight days and James Straight, whose conduct belies his name, five days.

FIND BODY IN ROOM HOURS AFTER DEATH

"Baldy" Jackson, Notorious Character About Town, Found Dead Yesterday—Funeral Held Today.

Twenty-four hours or more after death had come to John Jackson, a notorious character about town familiarly known as "Baldy", in his desolate room at the Bower City hotel, 71-72 South River street, his body was found in an unspeakable condition about six o'clock Monday afternoon. It was taken to the Nelson undertaking rooms and was buried this afternoon.

Jackson retired to his room Sunday morning about eleven o'clock according to the hotel employes. He was not disturbed and his whereabouts were not questioned until attention was called to the stench which arose from the decaying body.

Jackson had been in the city for a number of years coming originally from Sandwich, Ill., where his father a well to do farmer, resided. At his father's death he shared in the estate which was a considerable amount but owing to his dissolute habits it was quickly dissipated. A brother of some means, James Jackson, residing in North Dakota, at times sent his brother money and visited him on one occasion in this city. He was sent word of his brother's death by Chief of Police Ransom last evening but it is not expected that he will come to Janesville.

Jackson was frequently brought into the police court but was never charged with anything more serious than drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He has served numerous sentences in the county jail. When employed he worked for farmers in the vicinity of this city and was considered a good workman.

Contract for the construction of the new First National bank building will be let within a very few days, according to John G. Positive announcement will be made within the next two days.

Although the plans have not been made public in their entirety it is understood that the building will be one story in height with dimensions 40x100 feet and fireproof throughout. The exterior will be of pressed brick and cut stone. Chatten & Hammond of Chicago are the architects. The quarters used by Philip Rens as a saloon on North River street, and the former Hemming & Byrne quarters on West Milwaukee street will be vacated as the new building will occupy their sites.

JANESVILLE MOOSE LODGE WILL HAVE STRONG NINE

Despite the fact that the baseball team of the Beloit Moose lodge is considered one of the best lodge teams in the country the local organization is confident of developing a team that will be able to give them a hard contest. The teams representing the Beloit and Janesville lodges are to clash at Yost's Park, the contest being the main feature of the big picnic that the two lodges are going to hold on the twentieth of this month.

Two good pitchers are enlisted in the local Moose aggregation in Abraham and Burger and with Jack Brown behind the bat the locals will be able to hold their own regarding the battery. A strong field and outfield has been gathered in the society and on Thursday night of this week a captain will be elected and other business matters relating to the future of the team will be transacted. It is probable that the team will cross bats with several of the local nines in preparation for the Beloit contest.

THE LOBBY.

"All law and government must be founded on the conditions of the governed, and no man either in this House or in the other knows, or whoever has sat in either knew, all of the conditions of every business and every profession. No law can be as broad as the Republic that does not take into consideration every citizen in the Republic, and we must get much of that information from those who by experience in daily life understand best their own conditions."

This paragraph is from a speech delivered in the House of Representatives, the other day, by William H. Murray, representative from Oklahoma. Mr. Murray contended that lobbies are necessary to intelligent legislation; that no body of law-makers is competent to deal with the many complex questions which have to do with commercial and industrial life, without the aid of men who are directly interested in the work.

This contention is true. What does the average legislator know about railroads, and yet he is called upon frequently to make laws for these great transportation companies. What does he know about the employment of labor, yet he is expected to create laws regulating this great field of production.

Mr. Murray was president of the senate in his own state, before going to congress, and tells of a labor bill which called for electric headlights of 1500 candlepower to be placed on all engines. He says:

"I could see the general purpose of the bill to be to prevent wrecks and protect human lives, but I did not think the labor leader who requested the passage of this law knew the specific wants of railroad men. I knew that I did not know. I did not believe the senate knew about it. I walked down to the switch yard one day and said to an old Paddy, 'I want to read you a section of law.' He said, 'Begorra, who are you?' I said, 'This is Speaker Murray, Pat.' He said, 'All right.' I read the first section, and old Pat began to pull his hair and he said, 'If you pass that into law I will resign my job.' I said, 'What is the matter with it?' and he said 'Everything.' I said, 'I conceive the object is to prevent wrecks and to save life and property.' 'Yes, that is true; but does it not say every locomotive?' I said, 'Yes'; and he said, 'Now, suppose I am standing here in this switch, and some night a switch engine is here and one is down there, and they would proceed to meet me with these powerful lights, and I would not know whether it was on the track or not.' I could see that, and I said, 'What kind of an engine do you call this.' He replied a switch engine, and I asked, 'Are there any other that ought not to be equipped with this light?' and he responded that a 'dead' engine ought not to be equipped with it. I asked him what was a dead engine, and he said it was one going in for repairs. I then asked him if there were any other, and he said that there were, that engines operating wholly in the daylight ought not to be required to be equipped with this light. 'Any other?' I asked him, and he said no. I went back to the office and dictated a proviso to the first section: 'Provided, however, that switch engines, dead engines, and engines operated wholly in the daylight should not thus be required to be equipped,' and I submitted that to the house. The proviso prevailed, and it was accepted by the senate.

"I submit that to you, that but for the fact of that old Irishman lobbying unwillingly we would have done even the labor man an injustice; and so I say to you the man who undertakes to say that he knows all there is about life, which is the basis of legislation, is the biggest fool that ever attempted to legislate for any class of people."

There are all kinds of lobbies, and some of them are doubtless corrupt, but all legislative bodies are dependent on outside information for intelligent action, and Mr. Murray is right in his contentions.

A REAL INVESTIGATION.

That the investigation of the mining conditions in West Virginia have called forth considerable comment, favorable and otherwise, from the press throughout the country, the Wall Street Journal is most pronounced in its demand that the investigation be most full and complete and handles the situation in the following manner:

"While the senatorial committee which investigated the West Virginia coal mining war has not yet reported, there is some reason to doubt whether what is allaged to be the real and original cause of the outbreak will ever be unearthed. There was strong evidence that armed attacks upon labor camps were made by agents, presumably of the operatives, that they were unwarranted and barbarous, and there is grave question as to the propriety of the declaration of martial law.

"But beyond this, the ruthless history of many a warlike outbreak between labor and capital, there are said to be basic reasons and motives which it is feared inquiring senators will never fully uncover. It is charged that greed and self-interest deliberately created trouble in a land of peace for purposes of personal aggrandizement and, worse than all, accomplished this through the agency of unprincipled labor union officials. If this is true the senators must expose it.

"Up to a little while ago coal was mined in West Virginia under conditions perhaps nearer to satisfactory than in any other section of the country. In the rich valleys and along the waterside cliffs of this state are to be found veins averaging from five to nine feet of pure bituminous coal. These black diamonds were mined at rates equal per ton to any paid in the section, but, to use the vernacular of the unions, 'the mines were unorganized.' Being translated, this means that union and independent workmen stood side by side and earned a living, but the authority of the organization to dominate the business was not recognized. It is said that the average earnings were from $600 to $700 a year as against $554 in competitive fields in the Middle West. Miners were entirely satisfied, many had savings accounts, many bought homesteads. Nothing seemed further away than strikes and violence.

"But it must be remembered that mining pure coal from large veins is very different from separating slag and dirt from combustible material in a four-foot seam. No wonder the West Virginia product was the favorite at every western market. No wonder it had better coal to sell and could part with it cheaper than its rivals, despite the fact that its workers earned more per year. It was the triumph of superior natural wealth. It was a case in which operators in other states were losing by competition. Efforts to establish pools failed and West Virginia, having a good thing, proposed to keep it.

"Here is where, it is said, the western operators, driven to extremity by competition, appealed to their partners, the officers of the Miners' Union. Under the Indianapolis agreement not only were wages fixed, but the output was limited. Only the outsider, West Virginia, produced as much as it could sell. Obviously, the way to curb such competition was to 'organize' the section. If operators would not voluntarily restrict their business they must be put under the iron heel of unionism. They must be made to cut down work in order that laborers in other camps might have more to do. Union leaders were easily persuaded to undertake the job.

"Without any attempt to excuse the violence, without considering the principle of unionism, freely admitting that shooting into sleeping camps is barbarous, it is still the more necessary that all the facts be brought to light. No report from the senate committee that covers only half the ground will meet the case."

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

FROM WITHIN OUTWARD.

The average man believes his thoughts a secret. There was never a greater mistake. Our whole lives, our acts, our faces, our very hands, render our thoughts visible to one who has eyes to see. It is our thoughts that make us. They not only shape our features, but our destinies. They carve for us success or failure. By them is wrought our honor or our shame. They build even our bodies. They are at the same time our rulers, our sentinels and our architects.

He who said that man is a creature of circumstances got the cart before the horse. A man's circumstances are called for by the man himself. He chooses them, attracts them, creates them. He draws them to him by the spiritual attraction of gravitation. They are as truly the children of his brain as are the words he speaks.

We should revise the adage and make it read "Man is a creator of his circumstances."

No man often gets into a position where he cannot think himself out, and this is the secret of success. It is the chap who can turn a seemingly desperate situation to his advantage who comes out winner. It is all a matter of quick and nimble thinking. In this day it is the psychological factor that counts. Ask any Wall street man what is the determining element in his world, and he will tell you psychology. Ask any salesman for a big house the chief factor in making sales, and if he knows his business he will tell you psychology. Ask the best doctors what is their chief reliance in restoring health, and if they are up to date and successful physicians they will reply psychology. If men ever won by "main strength and awkwardness" they do not so win any longer.

You manifest what you think. The human body is a wonderfully sensitive organism that is shaped by the thinking soul which dominates it. It is a literal truth capable of demonstration that we can think ourselves into that which we yearn to become. This requires will power, however, concentration and perseverance. More than all else, it requires faith. We must have our feet planted on the rock of truth before we employ our thought forces.

It is for this reason, among many others, that we must take hold of the Christ. There is no safety elsewhere for the sea of so called occultism is uncharted and filled with dangerous reefs unless we have the true Pilot to guide us on our course. Jesus knew the power of thought over the life. He also knew the dynamics of faith.

The influence of thought over the life is not a dream. It is, I believe, the most real and substantial fact that will be developed during the twentieth century, and to its tremendous significance the world is just awakening.

This, That and the Other.

We have always felt that the station agent in a small town has a snap. We have watched him intermittently for twenty years or more. All that he has to do is to sweep out the station, take care of the fires, empty the ashes, make excuses to the patrons for trains that are late, ride up and down the track on a three-legged handcar and fill the switch lights, count the cash, do the telegraphing for the whole town and the railroad at the same time, carry nine tons of baggage every day, answer 9,000 fool questions, take the numbers of freight cars in the yards, work the semaphore, keep a cool head with the train dispatches, check trunks, answer the telephone, chase the hoodlums off the platform, pull the tramps out of box cars, watch the tracks for bad rails, and joints, sell tickets two or three feet long without making a mistake, handle the parcels freight, carry suitcases for old ladies; make out way bills, and figure freight rates to Honolulu and Jacksonville, Fla. DISPUTED LOCATION RECEIVES A LICENSE

Saloon License to Jos. Croak on South Main Street Issued by Council This Morning.

UNDER THE BAKER LAW

City Attorney Dougherty Files Opinion to the Effect That Action Can Be Legally Taken Under Present Statute.

Another saloon license, the forty-second, was granted by the city councilmen in session this morning to Joseph Croak at 15 South Main street. Mr. Croak's application was up for consideration with the others at the meeting yesterday afternoon but was referred to the city attorney to ascertain whether a license could legally be granted to the location in question under the Baker law.

City Attorney W. H. Dougherty presented his opinion on the question to the council before the license was granted this morning, in which he held that the issuance of the same would be legal and without any restriction of the state law.

Mr. Dougherty's opinion also upheld the action of the council in granting the Main street location a license in the year 1912 to 1913 in lieu of the McShane license on West Milwaukee street, a location which was forfeited by the terms of the will of the late Mrs. Mary McShane.

This is the only instance in which the operation of the Baker law has been called into question in this city and the case is an interesting one. Mr. Dougherty's opinion, which is given in full below, is plain in every detail and clears up the situation in an admirable manner.

Effect of Baker Law.

"To the Mayor and Council of the City of Janesville:

With respect to the legality of the licensed location at 15 South Main Street, the following is submitted. There has been of late a great deal of confusion in this state with respect to the legality of licensed locations. The Baker law, so called, went into effect on the 30th of June, 1907, and one of the effects of this law as well as one of its main purposes, was to irrevocably fix the location of saloons at the points then licensed, except "By reason of the refusal of the owner to lease the same for such purposes, their destruction by fire or the elements, or the same be refused by operation of law, or under the provisions of this act, then and in either of such cases such license may be issued or granted to some other location."

"The object of this law was not only to limit the number of saloon licenses but also to fix the locations, so that the entire business community might adjust itself in reliance thereon; in other words it meant that when a new business was started the owner of that business could depend with certainty upon the nature of the business to be transacted near him.

The Question Involved.

"The Supreme Court has recently put a very strict construction upon this statute, and the Attorney General has inerpreted this decision, so far as it require interpretation, for the guidance of Common Councils in the matter of issuing licenses. The only location in the City of Janesville which is subject to question under this law is the one at 15 South Main Street.

"This new location was opened up on the first day of July, 1912, and was in lieu of the McShane building on West Milwaukee Street. Now then, the only question in this case may be briefly put as follows: Were the persons in control of the former location, willing to further lease it for the purpose of conducting a saloon? If they were then the Council can not grant a license to the place on South Main Street. If they were not willing or were unable to so lease then the Council may grant the license on South Main Street.

McShane Situation.

"Prior to the first day of July, 1912, this property at West Milwaukee Street, which will be hereafter referred to as the McShane property, was owned by Mary McShane and during the year commencing July 1st, 1911, and ending July 1 1912, it was a legal license location. It appears that Mrs. McShane died some time early in the year 1911 leaving a will, by which will her executor was directed to sell the McShane property, and convert the same into cash for the purpose of paying the debts and legacies. By this will she bequeathed about two thousand three hundred dollars in specific legacies without personal estate out of which to satisfy the same. After the sale of the property and the payment of the legacies the balance of the money was directed to be paid to two residuary legatees, one of whom died prior to the first day of July, 1912, leaving as her heir, her husband.

"This was the exact legal situation of this property on the first day of July, 1912. The executor could not give a year's lease of it because of the specific directions made in the will and the residuary legatees could not give a lease of it because such action would be in plain conflict with the rights and duties of the executor. All of the specific legatees had a right to demand the sale of the property, in accordance with the terms of the will, and as against those neither the executor, the residuary legatees, or both were in position to lease; it being remembered that there was no personal property out of which to satisfy these legacies.

Location Within Statute.

"I cite the foregoing in some detail in order that the actual situation of this property as a matter of law may be clearly understood. The statement of the executor filed with the Council is directly in harmony with the foregoing situation. He says that under the will he considered that he had no authority to rent the said premises for the term of one year commencing July 1, 1912, for the purpose of a saloon or for any other purpose and that in keeping with his understanding of the will he sold the same on the 12th day of August, 1912, which was only a little more than one month subsequent to the time of granting licenses for the year 1912. It is therefore plain that the persons then in control renounced their licensed location.

"This location on South Main Street is within the licensed limits fixed by the Council and the only reason for withholding a license must be based upon the proposition that the location is not within the Baker law. To properly construe this law is not under all circumstances an easy task as the actual facts are not always obtainable. I have endeavored to make a careful examination of this matter and must report that in my opinion the present location at 15 South Main Street is within the law.

July 1, 1913.

City Attorney.

NEW FEATURE WILL INCREASE BUSINESS

New C. O. D. Feature of Parcel Post System Will Aid Merchants In Competing Mail Order Houses.

Beginning today the new C. O. D. feature of the parcel post system goes into effect and promises to be a big boom to the merchfants and other patrons of the parcel post. From now on parcels may be sent collect on delivery providing the necessary postage is affixed to the articles sent.

This new system affords the local merchants far better chance to compete more successfully with the large mail order houses, as the people residing in the country can phone their orders to the local stores and at a nominal cost have their wants supplied by the rural route carriers, and will not necessitate the long wait that accompanies the ordering from a mail order house. The route carriers will have an increased amount of work to do is certain and the new feature will serve to increase the popularity of the parcel post system. The new C. O. D. system will go hand in hand with the fact that mailable parcels may be fully insured for a very small cost.

Today also closes the work of registering all the mail that the mail carriers of the rural routes have carried during the past month. All mail including letter and parcels had to be weighed and counted before they were sent out of the office in compliance with order from the department at Washington. Some interesting statistics concerning the amount of mail each man carries and the distance he has to go in his route will be gathered from the official reports.

SPORT Snap-Shots

By MORRIS MILLER

Says Hughey Jennings apropos the Boston Red Sox' speed: "More power to 'em. Let 'em climb their fool heads off. But they won't win; they can't. Nobody will win the American pennant but Connie Mack's crowd, and that's all there is to it. The only way to stop them would be to entice them into a railroad smash-up and kill the whole bunch off. The Red Sox won last year just because they had a wonderful lot of luck and that's all. The Athletics were the best team last year, as they are this, and the luck of the Boston crew won't repeat. The Athletics are going to grab the rag this year and by more than ten games or I don't know a thing about it." And so it looks like they will, because Hughey really does know quite a bit about it.

They all hit the slide after the first knockout, declares Billy Nolan, Willie Ritchie's manager. And Nolan goes on to show the dope and prove that the greatest fighters that ever climbed over the ropes again to slump after they had been handed a K. O. Jack Dempsey, the greatest figure in the history of the game, and who in the height of his career was considered unbeatable, never showed his old class after George Le Blanche handed him the first wallop that put him away. So with all the rest of 'em that ever went down for the ten—Wolgast, K. O. Brown, Joe Mandot—they all lose their confidence after someone has put 'em to sleep.

President Ban Johnson of the American league hasn't exactly won a warm spot for himself in the hearts of Cleveland fans. A short while ago Johnson reprimanded Joe Birmingham, the Nap's manager, because an umpire was ragged by fans and players for a bad decision, and he even went so far as to say that Birmingham was no fit person to manage an American league team. All of which elicited exclamations of extreme disgust from Cleveland fans because Birmingham has given Cleveland the best team they have had in years. They have shown more grit and gumption than they ever did before, and Nap fans are decidedly in favor of the game they are playing and also more than pleased with Birmingham. The chances are that if Ban Johnson should spend a day in Cleveland he would find that he wasn't an awful big hit with the residenters of he Sixth City.

After playing professional baseball for two months, a class C player is sold to the Giants for $10,000. It's the first time anything of the sort ever happened. Alexander "Rube" Schauer of the Superior Northern league team is the party and he certainly won a rep on short notice. He's twenty-one, a regular bear for build and has made a wonderful record the short while he has been playing ball. He just naturally found he could pitch and in a short time was the talk of the baseball world. McGraw thinks himself very lucky to be able to sign the one real phenom of late years.

Swallow It Quick.

Impatient people water their miseries and hoe up their comforts; sorrows are visitors that come without invitation, but complaining minds send a wagon to bring their troubles in. Many people are born crying, live complaining, and die disappointed; they chew the bitter pill which they would not even know to be bitter if they had the sense to swallow it whole in a cup of patience and water.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

Every time he hits the ball he buys a cow. "Josh" Clarke, manager of the Sioux City (Ia.) Western league Indians, who is some hitter, now has six cows back on his farm in New York state. Only a few days ago, having knocked down $50 by pasting the animal on the tail with the horsehide sphere, he wired back to his old father, who takes care of the farm, to buy another cow. Manager Clarke is hitting around .390.

QUEEN MARY OF ENGLAND REVIVES ANCIENT CUSTOM; CASTS PENNIES FROM CARRIAGE AND WATCHES CHILDREN SCRAMBLE

A custom that had almost been forgotten was revived by Queen Mary when on her way with the king to the derby at Epsom Downs she cast pennies in the wake of the carriage. Children and their elders engaged in a wild scramble in an attempt to become the proud owners of such coveted souvenirs as the pence from the queen.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO HAVE SUMMER HOME NEAR WILSON'S SUMMER CAPITOL

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice (right), Lady Spring-Rice, their children Betty and Anthony, and Viscount Campden, attache of British embassy.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the new ambassador from England to this country, has chosen his summer home at Dublin, N. H., near the summer capitol chosen by President Wilson. The family, consisting of his wife, his seven-year-old daughter Betty and four-year-old son Anthony, will move into their summer home soon.

The accompanying picture was taken aboard the S. S. Franconia on her arrival at Boston a few days ago.

NOVELIST MAY NOT GET PORTUGAL POST

Meredith Nicholson.

Meredith Nicholson, the Indiana novelist, has asked President Wilson to withdraw his nomination as minister to Portugal if the appointment would embarrass him politically.

Objection to the appointment has been raised in some quarters on the ground that Nicholson has not always been a Democrat. It is understood that President Wilson will not withdraw the nomination on this account, and has urged Nicholson to accept notwithstanding protests.

The Daily Novelette

THE ONLY WAY.

"Pity, have pity upon me!"
She moaned in a heartrending way.
"Piffle!" he cried, as he grabbed her,
And kissed all her trouble away.

"Father! Father!" besought his daughter Eleanor. "Have you no pity left?" And a scalding tear dropped from her beautiful eye and smoked awhile on the carpet.

"Ichabod! Ichabod!" pleaded his wife. "Don't do this thing! Desist, else a bridgeless gulf shall henceforth yawn between us!"

The husband, lips parted, mustache gleaming in fierce resolve, eyes breathing heavily, poised the hatchet aloft. Murder was in the air. Rudolph, the youngest son, noticed it.

"Pop! Pop!" he begged. "Murder is in the air. You must not do this thing!"

But the distracted man was inflexible.

"Out of my way!" he shouted. "After I kill the first, the rest will be easy."

Swinging his hatchet, he brought it down with cruel force on the poor, defenseless supplicant.

"Father! Ichabod! Pop!" And with anguished cries they gathered about the tiny creature and tried every means in their power to fan into flame the waning spark of life. But the fly was a dead one.

"Swat 'em, that's the only way!" muttered the head of the anti-cruelty to animals' family. "Swat 'em, drat 'em, swat 'em!"

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Footville, July 1.—Squire F. Buck, aged seventy-three, died at his home in Footville yesterday after a long illness. He had been in failing health for the last three years, but became worse on June 20 and declined rapidly until his death. He was able to be up until last Friday. Mr. Buck was born in New York state, June 27, 1838, and was married on June 2, 1863 to Miss Emeline Stratton at Wantoma, Wis. Six children were born to them, twins dying in infancy, and a daughter Edith in 1897. The three who survive him are Mrs. Angie Evans of Northwood, Iowa, Mrs. Alcha Allen of Grabbitt, Arkansas, and A. W. Buck of Dayton. Mr. Buck enlisted in Company L, Seventh regiment of Wisconsin Infantry in 1861, and after eighteen months service was honorably discharged for disability. Twenty-five years ago he removed from Mazomanie to Footville, and has resided here ever since. He was a devoted member of the Methodist church. Funeral services were held from the home at 1:30 o'clock today, and at the Methodist church at 2:00 o'clock.

Dinner Stories

The celebrated French poet, Saint-Foix, who in spite of his large income was always in debt, sat one day in a barber's shop waiting to be shaved. He was lathered when the door opened and a tradesman entered who happened to be one of the poet's largest creditors. No sooner did this man see Saint-Foix than he angrily demanded his money. The poet composedly begged him not to make a scene.

"Won't you wait for the money until I am shaved?"

"Certainly," said the other, pleased at the prospect.

Saint Foix then made the barber a witness of the agreement, and immediately took a towel, wiped the lather from his face and left the shop. He wore a beard to the end of his days.

A story is told that Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, wishing, when she was dancing before the London public to be vaccinated and at the same time not be marred by a scar, asked her doctor where she had better be inoculated. The doctor replied that after seeing her performance that evening he could judge for himself the best way to conceal the operation. The next day, on Lady Constance presenting herself at his office, he looked at her with a twinkle in his eye and said, "I have come to the conclusion, Lady Constance, that you will have to swallow the vaccine!"

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

ON BELIEVING IN ONE'S SELF.

MODESTY as a quality has been so much praised that it has cast an edge of its glamor over many similar qualities which are not particularly desirable—diffidence, bashfulness and self-distrust, for example.

Once upon a time there was a girl who was naturally self-distrustful, and, who, because she disliked vanity and admired modesty so much, cultivated her self-distrust. This girl was not pretty. She was painfully conscious of the fact; her sensitiveness made her prickly and suspicious, and needless to say, her prickliness and suspicion did not bring lovers flocking to her feet, for men, especially, do not like that sort of thing.

Now in common with all girls on the borderland of plainness and prettiness, she had one great advantage over a beauty—there were glorious moments when a becoming gown, a flush of excitement, or a successful coiffure made her momentarily pretty, and thus gave her a thrill of happiness which no habitually pretty girl can experience. On one such occasion she chanced to be thrown into the company of a man to whom she was greatly drawn, and who would probably have been drawn to her if it had not been for the repellant force of her exaggerated self-distrust. Now, on this occasion her consciousness of her momentary beauty gave her confidence and happiness, and her confidence and happiness completed the circle by adding to her beauty. The man obviously admired her, which, of course, made the color in her cheeks flame pinker and the light in her eyes shine brighter. And that again completed the circle by adding to his admiration. So, altogether, they had a very happy day.

On the way home the young man, being a rather unusual person, gave way to a burst of frankness, "Why aren't you always like this?" he asked her. She turned startled eyes upon him. "What do you mean?" she countered, "Why don't I always look so well?"

"No," he said, "I didn't mean that. But why aren't you always so happy and sure of yourself?"

What the girl answered doesn't matter particularly. What does matter is that the thought sank in; she acquired a distrust of her self-distrust and is now trying to overcome it, with the most delightful results. And now I suppose you want to know if a wedding is likely to take place. Well, then, I should not be at all surprised.

It is by request that I tell this story; the request of the girl herself. She thinks there may be other women who are repelling love and admiration by exaggerated self-distrust.

The woman who is trying to win or to hold a man cannot afford to be uncertain of herself; such uncertainty begets uncertainty.

Believe in yourself, and you will make others believe in you. I think that is an equally good suggestion both for the man of business and for the woman who is engaged in "woman's only business."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Things Worth Knowing.

I find the quickest and most efficient way to singe a chicken is by holding it over the flame of a gas or oil stove. For those who have neither, a large lamp will answer. This is so much cleaner and handier, too, than the old way of using a lighted paper.

To Clean a White Straw Hat—Rub into the straw all the wet cornmeal it will hold, and let it dry in the sun. Leave the meal on for a day; brush out and repeat the process. The second time wet the meal with lemon juice. Should some stains remain after the dry meal is brushed off, wash the straw with peroxide of hydrogen and set in the sun to bleach.

Removing Stains—The following table may prove helpful for reference:

Acid—Use ammonia or chloroform.
Blood—Soak when fresh in cold water.
Chocolate—Soak in kerosene and wash in cold water.
Coffee—Treat with boiling water when fresh.
Fruit—Soak fresh stains in milk or use oxalic acid.
Grass—Rub the spots with molasses and wash.
Grease—Rub French chalk or fullers' earth on spots.
Ink—Use salt and lemon juice.
Iron rust—Use lemon and salt or hot solutions of oxalic acid.
Scorch—Wet and expose to sunshine.
Mildew—Use lemon and salt or Javelle water.
Mud—Soak in kerosene.
Paint—Use turpentine or benzine.
Wine—Put dry salt on fresh stains; warm milk on old ones.

The Table.

Date Muffins—Cream one-fourth cup of sugar with two tablespoons of lard, add two eggs, one at a time, and beat the mixture with a beater. One cup of milk, pinch of salt. Sift two tablespoons of baking powder into two cups of flour. Stone one cup of dates and cut fine. Add dates and flour alternately, drop in muffin pans and bake in quick oven 25 minutes. This is a fine breakfast food, as it is combined cereal and fruit.

Omelet Souffle—The yolks of two eggs, one-quarter of a cupful of powdered sugar, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, the whites of four eggs and salt to season. Beat the yolks until light. Add sugar, salt and vanilla. Cut and fold in the whites, beaten until stiff. Butter a baking dish, heap the mixture in it, sprinkle with powdered sugar and bake ten minutes in a moderate oven. Serve immediately. A fruit sauce made from raspberry, cherry, peach, pineapple, apricot or the juice of any fruit served with it adds to its daintiness.

Salad, Demi-Devil—Cut in slices cooked new potatoes, arrange them in a salad bowl and drench well with oil. Garnish with small cooked onions and stoned olives, and pour over all a mixture of oil and vinegar or oil and white wine. Allow this salad to stand at least two hours in a cool place before serving.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

CONDUCTED BY MRS. ALICE GITCHELL KIRK.

Cultivate Good Food Habits.

There are few house mothers who would think of serving hot cakes and sausages for breakfast on a summer morning; or pork chops with fried potatoes for dinner, even if they did occasionally use such dishes in their winter menu. Why? Because the stomach rebels against such heavy, heating, indigestible food, or really not food but things.

Simplicity should govern the preparation. Avoid all highly seasoned dishes. Prepare light meals with cooked or uncooked entire grain cereals. Eat plenty of vegetables prepared simply, that is, with no rich sauces and none of the juices wasted in cooking; plenty of fruits, not green nor overripe, and very little meat for the children.

Remember with the childen that milk is not a drink, but a food, and not a beverage as water to be added to a full meal.

Breakfast.

Hot Shredded White Biscuits Filled with Strawberries
Eggs in Nests Hot Coffee Cake
Coffee au Lait (Coffee wih Hot Milk)

Shredded Wheat Biscuits—With a sharp knife lift half of a crisp shredded wheat biscuit, make a hollow in each half and fill with fresh strawberries and serve with sugar and cream.

Eggs in Nests—Separate the yolks and whites of four eggs, one at a time, taking care not to break the yolks. Beat each white stiff, adding one-fourth teasponful salt. Place in a shallow ramikin or custard cup and in the center of each place the yolk of the egg. Set in a pan of water and bake slowly until set. Serve at once.

Hot Coffee Cake—Reheat the coffee cake made the previous day by placing in the oven for a few minutes. Then serve at once.

Luncheon.

Deviled Ham Sandwiches
Radish, Carrot and Nut Salad
Nut Loaf Cake
Fresh Raspberry Crush

Deviled Ham Sandwiches—Finely chop one cup cold boiled ham. Mix thoroughly with one-half cup sauce tartare, spread between thin slices of buttered bread, cut off the crusts, cut the sandwiches into triangles, oblongs, etc., and serve.

Sauce Tartare—To one-half cup of mayonnaise and one-fourth cup of whipped cream add one-half tablespoon each of finely chopped capers, pickles, olive sand parsley.

Radish, Carrot and Nut Salad—Put one cup of radishes and one cup of raw carrots and six olives through the meat grinder. Then mix with one-fourth cup English walnuts and dressing and serve on lettuce leaf. The second grinding is for the purpose of thoroughly blending the ingredients, so that the flavor is completely changed.

Fresh Raspberry Crush—Wash thoroughly one pint fresh red raspberries, then mash with one cup of sugar. Chill and serve.

Supper.

Lamb
New Parsley Potatoes
Radishes Olives
Orange and Mint Salad
Whole Wheat Bread and Butter
Strawberry Ice Cream.

Lamb—The lamb is cooked for Saturday night dinner and served cold Sunday. The potatoes are also cooked the day before and reheated and browned in a little butter, turning often and sprinkling over with choped parsley.

Orange and Mint Salad—Peel two large oranges, separate into sections and cut each section into thirds. Sprinkle with two tablespoons pulverized sugar, two tablespons finely chopped mint, one tablespoon grape juice and one-half tablespoon lemon juice. Chill thoroughly with salt and ice, then serve in sherbert glasses or orange baskets, garnished with a sprig of mint.

Strawberry Ice Cream—Wash and hull one and one-half pints strawberries, cover with one cup of sugar and let stand one hour. Mash and rub through colander. Heat one and one-half pints of cream with one-half cup of sugar until dissolved; cool, add one teaspoon each of vanilla and lemon juice and freeze to the consistency of mush, using three parts ice to one part salt, then gradually add the crushed fruit and finish freezing.

Stand for an hour or two packed in ice and salt to improve the flavor. Cover well with papers and burlap.

The KITCHEN CABINET

I AM my brother's keeper; therefore I will try to solve the problems of life with a view to his welfare, knowing that in the rightful adjustment of business, and labor and society, and life in its truest expression, my brother's welfare is my own, and mine is his.

CHICKEN DAINTIES.

There is no cold meat which is so easily served in a variety of ways when re-heated or served as a left-over, as chicken.

Canterbury Chicken.—Cook three and a half tablespoonfuls of butter with one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion until yellow, stirring almost constantly to prevent burning. Add one tablespoonful of cornstarch, and pour on, stirring all the time, a cup and a half of chicken stock (the liquor in which a chicken has been cooked). Bring to the boiling point, and add one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of paprika, half a cup of celery cut in small pieces and one and one-half cupfuls of chopped chicken. Serve very hot, and garnish with toast points and parsley.

Chicken Victoria.—Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, and add the yolks of three hard cooked eggs rubbed to a paste. Soak a fourth of a cup of cracker crumbs in a fourth of a cup of cold milk fifteen minutes, then add the egg mixture. Pour on gradually one cup of hot chicken stock, and when boiling add a cup of cooked chicken cut in small pieces.

Chicken in Croustade.—Remove the crust from a five-cent loaf of bread, cut out the center, to leave a box-shaped case, brush with butter and toast in the oven until brown, and serve filled with the following mixture: Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on one and three-fourths cupfuls of milk, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and add one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, two cupfuls of cut of fowl and the same amount of fresh mushrooms which have been cooked five minutes in a little salted water. Cook until all are well heated, and pour into the croustade.

NEW GRECIAN QUEEN IS BELOVED BY HER PEOPLE; SHE'S KAISER WILHELM'S SISTER

Queen Sophia.

Sophia, queen of Greece, has many of the traits which have made her brother, Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, a great figure in world politics. Like the German emperor, too, she is very popular with her people. She was married to King Constantine, then crown prince, in 1886. They have five children.

The accompanying photograph is the very latest of the Grecian queen, and has just reached this country.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What can a girl of twenty-five do in a case like this:

She married when a mere child. Her husband deserted her later, his folks writing her of his death. Thinking herself a widow she married again. Now her former husband has appeared, very much alive.

(1) What can she do to make her marriage legal to husband No. 2.

(2) Is her marriage to husband No. 2 illegal when she though she was free to marry?

(3) Can she be prosecuted for bigamy?

(4) Please state what steps to take in the matter.

(5) Will she have to obtain a divorce from husband No. 1 and remarry husband No. 2 to make her marriage to husband No. 2 legal?

WORRIED.

(1) Divorce husband No. 1 for desertion, then marry No. 2. (2) Yes. (3) A court would not hold her guilty under the circumstances. Have you kept the letter announcing his death? (4) Have a good lawyer draw up a divorce petition from No. 1. (5) Answered above.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a man of twenty, a church member and always intend to live a clean and honorable life. I have been going with the girls more or less ever since I was a "kid", but for the last few months I have taken the same girl (two or three years younger than I) out frequently.

She is one of the brightest and jolliest girls I ever went with and as I began to feel pretty well acquainted I insisted on putting my arm around her. She objected very strongly and seemed to feel as if I had done an intentional wrong.

Was there any harm in that?

I have enjoyed her company very much, as we have many tastes in common, and should hate to drop her, but if she is always going to be so particular, am afraid our good times are over.

What do you think? Was she particular just because she is young and hasn't been out with men much or is she "different" from most girls? Although we differed so greatly on that occasion, I do not think my friend is angry now, as she treats me as usual whenevr we chance to meet.

TROUBLED TOM.

Look here, Tom! Haven't you sense enough to know a decent girl when you see her.

If you were thirty instead of twenty you would be looking for just that kind of a girl to marry—a girl who allows no liberties to any man except the one she loves and the one who expects to marry her.

And you, my boy, are not doing anything manly in being angry because she is "particular." A self-respecting girl and a girl worth knowing is always "particular," no matter who the man may be. And just because she is, you know you can trust her and that she isn't letting any sort of mushy creature slop around her.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I belong to the "King Harold's Missionary."

I am on the "silver side" and we have to entertain the "blue side." Would you give a musical entertainment, or would you take the other side to the woods and go fishing?

(2) Would it be best to have your hair cut off short to your head after having typhoid fever? (3) What will grow hair quickly?

A KING HAROLDER.

(1) This time of year they'd probably enjoy the woods and fishing more than a musical entertainment. (2) Some times it is best, if the hair has grown very thin. (3) Rub a little vaseline well into the scalp every day.

An Electric Restaurant.

An electric restaurant is in successful operation in London. The cooking is faultless and the prices are lower than those of the neighboring establishments of the same class.

Every Day Talks For Every Day People. . .

Just plain everyday people shouldn't worry. Read the following and take a vacation:

Worry not over the future,
The present is all thou hast.
The future will soon be present,
And the present will soon be past.

For every evil under the sun
There is a remedy or none.
If there be one, try and find it,
If there be none, never mind it.

Consider well your actions,
What's done you can't recall.
No use to pull the trigger,
Then try to stop the ball.

It's easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows along like a song;
But the one worth while, is the one who can smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

CONVENTION PROVES A DECIDED SUCCESS

Rally Held at Afton Baptist Church on Sunday Was Well Attended.—Good Program Enjoyed.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Afton, June 30.—In spite of the intense heat Sunday, there was a very fair attendance at the local Sunday School convention held at the Baptist church.

First on the program was the fifteen minute song service led by Arthur Roadhouse of Beloit, in which all joined heartily.

The devotional service was opened by scripture reading by L. C. Walters, Superintendent of Afton Sunday school, followed by several short prayers.

The address, "The Churches Golden Opportunity" by Thomas Dobson, of Beloit, was a very interesting one. The points he brought out were that the churches did not always grasp the opportunities for getting the young people into the church membership, they forget that the Sunday schools of today are the churches of tomorrow.

After forty-five minutes devoted to the study if the Sunday school lesson dinner was served by the ladies in the basement of the church and a social hour was enjoyed.

The afternoon session opened with song service led by Arthur Roadhouse, followed by a scripture reading by Thomas Dobson.

Homer McCabe, Superintendent of the Baptist Sunday school of Beloit, then gave one of the most interesting talks of the day on the subject, "Some of the Pleasures of Sunday School Work." Dr. McCabe brought out the fact that pleasure was derived from seeing the development of the young people which are being trained up into Sunday School work, emphasizing the point which was brought out in the morning, that of the young children now, must be found the material for advanced Sunday school and church work later on.

Arthur Roadhouse's talk on "My Class of Boys' showed how much can be accomplished with a class of boys ranging in ages from fifteen to nineteen years of age, the age at which it is hard to keep boys in the Sunday school. The methods which Mr. Roadhouse uses show much self sacrifice and hard work on his part, and it is very gratifying to him to see his boys growing up into church workers.

It was a matter of regret that Mr. Brown who preaches at Shopiere and the Reverend J. C. Hazen of Janesville were unable to be present and take part in the program.

Exercises were closed with the song "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and prayer by Mr. Dobson.

Meeting was presided over by Roy Cole, town of Beloit.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

VACATION.

By Howard L. Rann.

VACATION is something which a man takes for the benefit of his health and a woman for the benefit of her dressmaker. The average man does not look upon his summer vacation as a dress parade and seldom takes more than one change of trousers with him, but his wife is never satisfied unless she is accompanied by a carload of V-shaped gowns and a trunkful of toilet accessories.

No two people enjoy the same kind of a vacation. Some men will leave home without a safety razor and plunge into the Canadian woods, staying away for several weeks and accumulating fish stories, mosquito bites and whiskers in wild profusion. Their idea of a vacation is to get lost eight hundred miles from a barber shop and sleep on the mossy turf, where the carnivorous red ant can roam at will up and down their reclining forms and there is nothing to drink except canned corned beef. Each man is allowed to carry several hundred pounds of birch canoe and baked beans around the portages, which are usually two and one-half miles long, and this affords a unique and pleasing form of exercise.

Other men prefer to enjoy their vacations at some place where there is more population and fewer specimens of the unterrified jigger. These men pick out some costly resort, with porcelain bath attachment and long distance telephone in every room, and secure exercise by changing from negligee to evening dress. The man who spends his vacation communing with a manicure and valet seldom collects any permanent sunburn and returns to town looking like an advertisement for a face lotion.

As a general proposition, the business man who never takes a vacation because he hasn't the time to spare finds out sooner or later that he hasn't anything left but time. If people would take more and longer vacations, there would be fewer cases of night-riding dyspepsia and nervous prostration. There are times when a man had better let up while the letting is good.

FINISH ONE PORTION OF RALROAD BRIDGE

Ironworkers Rush Work on New Bridge and Finish Laying Girders and Cement Slabs.

All the girders and cement slabs for the foundation of the road bed on the new upper railroad bridge, which the Cleary-White Construction company is rebuilding for the railroads running through this city, have been laid by the iron workers, and next week the attention of the workmen will be turned to the tearing down of the other section of the bridge after the tracks have been transferred to the new portion.

The iron workers were equipped with the most modern bridge machinery and rushed the work of laying the big fifty ton double deck girders with all possible speed. After placing them in position with the derrick they were riveted with pneumatic hammers. The workmen were always in constant danger and thought nothing of walking the edge of the girder forty feet above the river.

The rivets were driven into the iron while they were white hot and were caught from the man at the forge with a bucket. There are six of these girders each weighing fifty tons and are sixty-three feet in length, making the bridge 378 feet long. The girders rest on iron plates which will later be bolted and cemented to the piers, making them absolutely immovable.

On top of these girders the company has laid stone slabs weighing seven and a half tons apiece and eighty-six of them are necessary for one side of the bridge. To protect the lower part of the bridge from the weather an inch of asphalt has been put down. The track will be ballasted with a high grade of sand, and because of the construction of the bridge there will be very little noise or vibration.

The speed with which the structure has been built within the last month has been due to favorable weather and a large force of men were employed to rush the work as the contract calls for a finished bridge on July thirty-first. During the spring the workmen were seriously hampered by high water which necessitated the puddle damming of all the coffer dams, causing an expensive loss of time to the construction company.

The work has been in charge of W. E. Burgett, who has had vast experience in bridge building and has been in charge of some of the most difficult bridges that the Northwestern company has had built on their system. C. L. Foley, a young engineer of considerable experience and a graduate of Princeton University, has been Burgett's assistant in the engineering work.

When the bridge is finished it will be the finest of its kind in the middle west and well able to withstand the heavy traffic that the Northwestern and St. Paul railroads send over these lines. The structure consists of five piers and two abutments made of the best concrete and reinforcements possible. In the bed of the river the foundations of the piers extend for a distance of sixteen feet, giving a firm purchase for the piers. The footing extends six feet above the bottom and the pier has a step of three and a half feet before the neat work begins. From the bed of the river the piers are thirty-two and a half feet, making the bridge, counting girders and cement slabs, nearly forty feet high.

The river gang in charge of Assistant Foreman William Schoor and E. Luikious, have left for Elroy where the company is erecting a small bridge for the Northwestern company. The railroad's work has been in charge of J. R. Burk, who has been connected with the engineering department of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad for the last seventeen years. As soon as the tracks have been transferred from the old section of the structure to the new side the iron workers will tear down the original girders and bracing and extend the piers up and the other half of the bridge finished. The officials in charge express themselves as confident of finishing the work before July thirty-first.

203 Walnut St., Hillsboro, Ill. — "My child had a breaking out on the lower limbs which developed into eczema. They caused her to lose much sleep and she was constantly tormented by severe itching and burning.

"I tried several well-known remedies, but got no relief until I got a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, which did so much good that I got a large quantity that cured her in ten days after she had been affected for two months." (Signed) Mrs. Edith Schwartz, Feb. 28, 1913.

The Argyle Case

A Novelization by J. W. McConaughy of the Successful New Play by Harriet Ford, Harvey J. O'Higgins and Detective William J. Burns, In Which Robert Hilliard Is Appearing :: ::

"He knows!" she gasped. "He knows she's my daughter!"

Kayton threw back his head and straightened up.

"Do you think I'd have sent her here if you weren't her mother?" he snarled savagely. "You ought to have gone when I told you to. Good God! Haven't you any feeling for her at all? I might have known I couldn't trust her to a woman who left her when she was a baby for a man like Kreisler!"

He had apparently lost all sense of the terrible situation save in so far as the girl's name might be smirched. With a woman's quick intuition Mrs. Martin saw and her face lit with a fierce joy.

"Friedrich!" she cried, in a shrill voice. "We've got him!"

The German's burning, steady eyes had never left the detective's face, but his right hand had made the trip it started before—but this time it had fulfilled its errand. It was concealed in the folds of Mrs. Martin's skirt.

"What do you mean?" he growled.

"He's in love with her!"

Her finger pointed to the scene across the room and Kayton winced as if the hand had thrown a spear at him.

"Whatever you do to me!" cried the woman triumphantly, "you'll do to her! She's my daughter and I'll claim her!"

Kayton's eyelids narrowed, and he gritted his teeth.

"You're a rotten pair!" he said slowly.

But the woman was all but hysterical.

"I've got her out of my life until now—and you brought her into it!" she cried. "From now on she'll get what I get!"

"You can't drag her so low that I won't drag her back!" declared Kayton in a tense voice. "She's accused of this murder, and the only way I can clear her is by showing you up."

At the word Kreisler's right hand darted up. Kayton's lip curled, and he tossed his revolver across the floor. He was a brave man, like Kreisler.

"Go ahead!" he exclaimed contemptuously, walking almost up to the muzzle of the revolver that was held in a hand as steady as the cool mind behind it. "Shoot and she'll hang for it!" He pointed to the woman that still clung to Kreisler's left arm. "And my boys will kill you and your gang like rats in a trap! The house is surrounded. There's a dictograph in that window. My men hear every word we say. I have only to speak an order to have it obeyed. The moment you threatened to kill me they started to raid the house."

As if in instant proof of his words, even while the white crease in Kreisler's forefinger showed the pressure on the trigger, the buzzer above the doorway burred out its warning.

Slowly the finger relaxed, and the arm came down to his side. His eyes turned to the woman's face with an expression that in its very calmness struck despair and agony to her soul.

"It has come," he said simply.

"Put up your hands!" snapped Kayton. Kreisler glanced at him indifferently and found himself facing the steel circle of the muzzle of a second revolver. Then his eyes came back to the woman. His look at Kayton and the revolver was no more than that we give a stranger on the street.

"Put up your hands!" repeated Kayton warningly.

The German, ignoring him, kissed the woman's dank forehead, gently disengaged his arm and, leaving her standing rigid with eyes closed, turned his back on Kayton and walked slowly to the door. Here he suddenly threw up one hand, not both hands; there was a sharp report—and Friedrich Kreisler had accepted defeat in his warfare with society.

With a low moan the woman threw herself across his lifeless body just as Manning, followed by the other members of Kayton's force, burst into the room. Kayton bent over the still insensible girl for an instant. Then he turned to his assistant.

"Joe, call a cab."

CHAPTER XIV.
After the Raid.

THERE were columns about it in the morning papers, but no astute reporter saw any connection between the "unearthing of the most gigantic counterfeiting plot in history" and the Argyle murder. None knew that Miss Mazuret had been in the house. Gage, Skidd and Mrs. Martin were incommunicado, the latter too numb and dazed to talk even if she could have been approached. As a special favor to Kayton she was held under his orders to be taken to his office when wanted in the morning.

Kayton appeared as fresh and clean shaved and immaculate as was his wont. He heard the final reports of the night's work from his various aids, dispatched them out for breakfast, ordered the stenographer to hustle with the dictograph notes and sent for Manning. The young man entered, eating his morning apple.

"Hurley's all right, governor," was his greeting. "He's down in his office."

"Nervous?" queried his chief, with a faint smile.

"Oh, gee!" murmured Manning. "He got up all right and had a big breakfast ordered and then saw the paper—and he didn't eat a bite. He piked back to his room and packed his little bag. Then he read the papers again and unpacked it. We went down on the 'L' with him, and he passed his street, and we thought he was going to bent it, but I guess he was so worried he forgot his station. He's waiting in his office now with his ear to the ground."

The Woman Threw Herself Across His Lifeless Body.

Kayton smiled. "Let's start a little rumble for him, Joe," he said, picking up the telephone receiver. "Get me Hurley. We've got to find out who this Hurley is, Joe, and get his record."

He ran over some typewritten pages that Leischmann dropped noiselessly at his elbow and grinned.

"Hurley's got us sized up in fine shape," he remarked, glancing down sideways. "According to him, I'm a pinhead."

"He has a great sense of humor, governor." Manning assured him solemnly. "He laughed so hard last night that he nearly split the dictograph."

Kayton laughed and then suddenly frowned for silence.

"Hello, Mr. Hurley," he said cheerfully into the phone. "I think I've obtained a clew on your Argyle case. Drop in and see me this morning, can you? Yes, I'd like to consult you. It's too confidential for the telephone. All right. Thanks."

He hung up the receiver, laughing silently.

"Joe, go to the hotel and get Miss Mazuret," he said quickly. "Don't go to the desk. Go to the telephone girl—she's all right—and send my name up. Get her out without attracting any attention, and bring her right down here."

"All right, governor!" said Manning, and he hurriedly slouched out. Kayton sent for Leischmann and gave him some particular instructions in connection with the last page of the dictograph report and the specimen of Mrs. Martin's signature as "Nellie Marsh" that he had in his desk.

"Look here," he said, "I want you to type in above the name—there! you see?—as if it were the final page of her confession—the usual thing before a notary public, and have two of the boys sign right down here and put on a couple of wafers. Make it 'Page 9, N. M. statement.'"

"Yes, sir," said Leischmann and added as he withdrew, "Mr. Colt has come."

"Oh!" Kayton chuckled. "See if he has Mrs. Martin with him. If he has send her in, and tell him I'll see him later."

Unconsciously Kayton drew himself together, and his muscles stiffened as the door of the outer office opened, and Mrs. Martin walked into the sanctum. She had dressed herself with a care that only accentuated the ghastliness of her face and the madness of anguish in her dark eyes. Slowly and deliberately as an automaton, she advanced to the desk, her eyes fixed with deadly intensity on Kayton's impassive face.

"God!" she exclaimed at last in a low, passionate voice, in which utter hate and utter despair were strangely blended. "God, I wish I'd let him kill you!"

Kayton met her terrible eyes as calmly as if she had wished him a pleasant good morning.

"What good would that have done?" he asked quickly. "If I hadn't caught him some one else would. You were playing a game that you couldn't win. You knew that. You said so. You told him last night that every prison in the world was waiting for him."

The woman turned away with a groan and sank weakly into a chair. "He's dead! He's dead!" she moaned.

"There was nothing for him to do but kill himself," said Kayton, as quietly as before. "Why, he killed himself when he went into this thing. The government would never have let him out. He'd have been buried alive."

Mrs. Martin choked and shook her head wildly, as if struggling for breath.

"Oh," she cried distractedly, "let me alone—let me alone!"

Kayton gave her a look of pity. "I would if I could, Mrs. Martin," he said gently, with unmistakable sincerity. "I've had to make you a good deal of trouble. I'd like to give you a little help now, if I can."

He paused a moment and studied the worn face before him.

"I can clear you of the charge against you in the counterfeiting case," he went on in the same quiet matter of fact way, "but I want you to tell me everything—all that you know of the Argyle case."

Mrs. Martin drew in her breath with a gasp, leaned forward and gripped the edge of the desk with both hands.

"Why do you say that to me?" she cried excitedly. "Why do you pretend I know anything about that?"

Kayton, too, leaned forward until there was a scant eighteen inches between his calm, cold face and her trembling, twitching mask.

"Because, after Mr. Argyle's fall," he said swiftly, "dragging off the tablecloth, you were leaning forward—just as you are now—holding on to the table with both hands!"

And, reaching over quickly, he tapped her wrists smartly and leaned back.

Like one in the numb horror of nightmare, Mrs. Martin slowly pulled herself to her feet.

"What!" she whispered. Kayton coolly took some sheets of paper from the top drawer of his desk and held them out for her scrutiny.

"These are the finger prints you left on the table that night," he said coolly. "They coincide with the ones you left here on my blotter." She dropped heavily back into the chair with an inarticulate moan.

"This," added Kayton slowly, with a stern gaze, "this is jury proof of complicity."

The woman looked at him dully, stolidly, for all the suddenness of his attack.

"You can't prove it!" she cried hoarsely. "I had nothing to do with it—nothing!"

"To prove that," returned Kayton coldly, "you will have to confess who did it."

"You can do what you like!" she broke out wildly. "I don't care! I don't care! It doesn't matter!"

"It matters to an innocent girl!" declared Kayton sternly. "Your daughter's life is ruined unless we can clear her from this charge."

The woman choked, closed her eyes and pressed her clinched hands against her bowed chin. For the first time tears crept from under her eyelids.

"And yet,"—Kayton spoke with infinitely gentle reproach—"you refuse to do anything for her."

She started and threw out her hands in a gesture of entreaty and despair.

"I don't want her to know me! I don't want to know her!" she cried. "I'm dead as far as she is concerned."

"If you go on the stand as the state's witness," urged Kayton, "your past can be absolutely protected. Your daughter need never know any more about you than she does today."

"You don't need me to clear her," she protested desperately. "You know

"This is jury proof of complicity," he said.

she didn't do it. You know it was some one else. Why don't you find him yourself—without me? Leave me alone! Leave me out of it!"

Kayton's figure and his expression relaxed. He nodded in the friendliest fashion.

"You needn't say any more, Mrs. Martin," he assured her quietly.

"What do you mean by that?" she demanded, with a new dread.

"You have told me what I wanted to know," replied Kayton.

"How—what?"

"You have told me it was not Dr. Kreisler," he answered to the unspoken question. "You wouldn't risk going to the electric chair to protect a dead man?"

Named Residences.

In England one is taxed for calling one's house by a pet name. Some offenders ought to be taxed a lot; for instance, "Happiholme" is the name of one dirty, decayed, originally cheap little house.

UNCLE WALT
The Poet Philosopher
Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams
BY WALT MASON

Oh, when we take a holiday, a lazy, idle, jolly day, it spoils us for three weeks; we hate to bend our backs again, to get right down to tacks again; we sigh for woods and creeks. All industry goes glimmering; we think of woodlands HOLIDAYS Mary-Gardening — and labor's beyond pardoning, and idleness is sweet. The call of things primordial insistent is and cordial, insistent, loud and clear; the daily grind's too vigorous; a fellow can't be vigorous when summertime is here. A murrain on this laboring!

We surely should be neighboring with birds and bumblebees; we surely should be pondering on Nature's works and wandering beneath the spreading trees. But some of us are busted all, and things are so adjusted all, we cannot raise the price; the uncle turns us down again, and so we stay in town again, and put our dreams on ice. We kick at things and kick 'em more; the lordly pine and sycamore in vain for us may fret; the lovely mountain evergreen to our eyes shall be never green—we'll stay at home and sweat. But when the summer's perishing and idlers come back cherishing their snakebites and their tan, from mountain, lake and river port, all full of hay and liverwort, we'll praise the labor plan.

Ignore Them.

Little minds are vexed with trifles. —Le Rochefoucauld.

Is termed the ideal vacation land and it would seem as if this were true, judging from the beautiful pictures of woods and streams illustrated in the booklet of the above title.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 1, 1873.—The Fourth: The meeting called last night at the common council rooms in the interest of the fourth of July celebration, was presided over by Mayor Sutherland.

The committee on stands reported that a grandstand would be erected in the upper portion of the Court House Park, opposite Christ church. The stand will be sufficiently large enough to accommodate one hundred persons and seats will be provided around the stand for the listeners.

The committee on decorations reported everything progressing favorably.

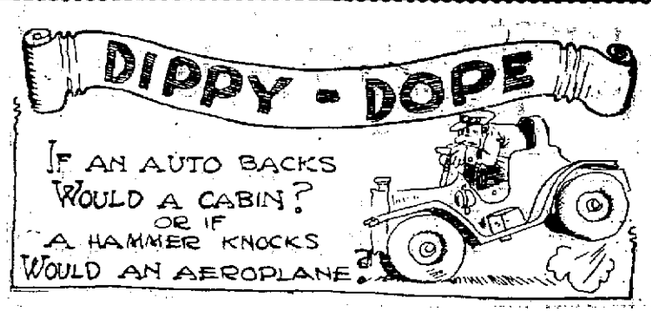

The chief engineer of the fire department, Colonel Britton, reported that the entire department would join in the procession and that the steamers and the trucks would be tastefully decorated.

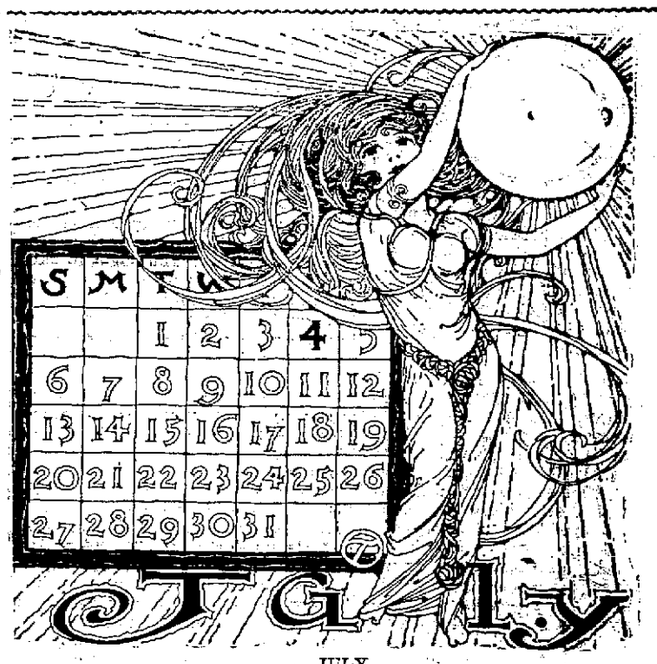

Other business relating to the program was transacted and the celebration will undoubtedly surpass any that was ever held in this city.

Beloit is in deep mourning because Janesville is to celebrate the fourth. The Free Press thinks with Beloit's manufacturing plants, its water power plant and college, it could do much better than Janesville if given a chance.

It was rather humilating to a wagonload of Fulton girls, who positively declined male escort on a recent public exhibition to be compelled to hire a man to drive their frisky team while on the way out. Female rights in this section have somewhat circumscribed since that occurrence.

A gray-headed veteran in the town of Porter has challenged a venerable rival to meet him on the broad prairie and fight it out for the hand of a school marm who has ensnared their affections. Reports from the seat of war are daily expected.

JULY.

July, fierce daughter of the sun,
Scant joy for us you hold;
But it would save us lots of mon
To store your heat up by the ton
Against December's cold.

Find the coal man.
